Interoperability of Health Care Data Advanced by the International Classification for Nursing Practice (ICNP)

Geneva, Switzerland, 3 July 2012. The International Council of Nurses (ICN) is pleased to recognise the significant advancement of nursing and health care terminologies in Poland, demonstrated by the 2-3 July 2012 conference organized by the Polish Ministry of Health National Centre for Health Information Systems (CSIOZ). The conference, "Electronic Medical Records - Interoperability and Implementation", is an important milestone for Polish nursing and health care as work continues in ICNP translation, education and clinical application.

ICNP, an international standard nursing terminology for use in electronic health records, is part of the ICN eHealth Programme, whose vision is to transform nursing through the application of information and communication technology. Systematic nursing documentation supports analysis of nursing interventions related to patient outcomes and the data-based decision-making and policy development.

"Nurses in Poland are demonstrating leadership for the profession while also ensuring full interdisciplinary collaboration for improved health care delivery. Given the challenges in health care today, such as economic uncertainty and an ageing population, standard documentation that results in systematic health care data nationwide supports evidence-based policy development and resource allocation," stated David Benton, ICN's Chief Executive Officer.

In 2010, the Polish Nurses Association and CIOZ, in collaboration with ICN, organised a conference on the topic of ICNP to support interdisciplinary collaboration for translation and education. Unifying ICNP with medical terminologies such as ICD-10 and ICF will improve interoperability of electronic health record documentation. The Polish Ministry of Health supports the Polish Nurses' Association's efforts to establish and implement ICNP.
